About me

Nina Sterzl is a partner at Vavrovsky Heine Marth Rechtsanwälte. As part of the Dispute Resolution team, she specialises in disputes before national courts and authorities. She particularly advises clients in intellectual property law (primarily unfair competition and trademark law), in media law cases and in the enforcement of property-related claims.

Nina focuses her advice on interim relief, both in applying for and defending interim injunctions, in the areas of unfair competition, trademark and media law as well as in the protection of privacy and in connection with real estate claims.

Nina has extensive litigation experience in complex commercial disputes. In recent years, she has focused in particular on pandemic-related disputes, primarily representing laboratories in enforcing and defending unfair competition claims.

Nina also advises on construction law disputes (both on the side of the client and contractor) and on the judicial and extrajudicial resolution of conflicts relating to the purchase or sale of real estate. In this area, too, Nina benefits from extensive litigation and advisory experience before courts and authorities.

Leading legal directory The Legal 500 once again recognises her as a "Rising Star" in its latest ranking, as it did in 2019. Clients are impressed by her legal know-how and her ambition for her clients. In 2018, the business magazine "trend" ranked her second in its lawyer ranking in the category "The most striking young lawyers (under 30)".

In 2017, Nina, together with partner Dieter Heine and lawyer Fabian Rischka, published "Intellectual Property Law, Supplement AUSTRIA" in the International Encyclopaedia of Laws published by the internationally renowned specialist publisher Wolters Kluwer Verlag.
